

Bachelor's Completion Program in Criminology and Criminal Justice Online

The Bachelor's Completion Degree in Criminology and Criminal Justice Online Program is designed with the criminal justice and law enforcement professional in mind. This 66-credit hour program, combined with the appropriate lower-division undergraduate coursework, will lead to either a Bachelor of Criminology and Criminal Justice from UT Arlington, or a Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice from UT Brownsville or UT Permian Basin. UT Dallas also contributes coursework for the program.

This program is available fully online, allowing students to continue part-time or full-time work. No campus visits are required. Courses are delivered via the UT TeleCampus, a central support unit for online education within the UT System. The TeleCampus features an award-winning website similar in design to a traditional campus with admissions links, a digital library and student support services. Students interact via chatrooms and Internet-based group activities and research projects. Courses run on a semester schedule in keeping with the academic calendars of the UT System.

Courses offered include: Introduction to Criminal Justice; Legal Aspects of Evidence; Comparative Justice Systems; Ethics; Probation and Parole; Seminars of Issues in Law Enforcement; Institutional Corrections; Criminal Careers and Behavior Systems. Each 3-credit course will be conducted over the Internet by the same talented faculty teaching on-campus. The program is designed to meet the educational needs of traditional and non-traditional students. Participants in the online degree program learn about crime causation, criminal justice issues, juvenile justice, law enforcement, courts, corrections, and law.

In the context of a well-rounded education, the online completion degree provides students with access to a four-year degree in criminology and/or criminal justice, with the online program comprising primarily of junior and senior level coursework. The degree program prepares students for professional careers and advancement opportunities in criminal justice or related fields and is designed for students who have already completed their first two years of appropriate undergraduate courses. while meeting your academic

To participate in the CCJO program, you must choose a home campus by applying to and being accepted by one of the three universities that confer the degree. Criteria, procedures, and deadlines for admission vary slightly from one university to another. Consult the participating universities for specific details. Additionally, all CCJO students must have already successfully completed 60-63 credit hours of appropriate college-level coursework.
